Written for the Saturday Evening Post.

TO THEE ——LYDIA.

Bread Mountain Parent.

In the early flush of the morning hour
When Beauty is out in her primal power!
And the tribes of Nature are fresh and full!
And her eye a light as the playing sir!
When the blood leaps up from the joyous heart
To the cora-worn cheek with impassioned start!
When life is in such intensity of heart, we hold,
Or lest, or the bud by the zephyr stirred,
Or is seen the proud-hearted and fashioned one—
Is taught by a higher class all is heaven.—
There is love of thee in this wild wood glen,
From one who has fled for the haunts of men:
Who has left the city, as for burning sin;
Dries up the fountains that gush in forest limb,
And the leaf drops down from its forest limb,
And the petals of each and flower wane dim;
As the flocks retire to the wooded shades
From their feet lave—the fields where at noon they strayed;

As the breeze moves timidly on its course
Nor languid to gather a rose or a flower,
As the tall grass bends, tho' by no wind-breath,
Impress on it by the hand of Death;
So does our poet from the haunts of men wave,
Yet retires from thee, nor is stilled again.

Then gather the shadows of evening now!
And minon sends over the wearied sun,
Like the sheltering arm of a mother's love
Around the infant in life-time brief,
And the rapid sound of the woodman's blow,
And the fall of the tree, and the feeding bird,
Are the sounds of evening—the voice of peace,
Are the sounds of evening—the voice of peace,
Are the sounds of evening—the voice of peace

West, let us remember the story of their past wrongs—let us think of the fate of the magnanimous Sakamaw, whose memory

"Is long after years,
Should kindle our bosoms and waken our tears."

Years rolled on. The wilderness began to "blossom like the rose," and the solitary places to look joyous with life, and bright with promise; while on the fair banks of the Ohio, the inhabited villages, the busy town, or the prosperous city, rose in beauty and imitative splendor. It was where the "father of ancient waters" flows on in all the opulence of its waves, still deep in the bosom of the wilderness, an isolated cabin reared its head beneath thick clustering trees of shadowing vines, and perennial trees. The moon showered down its virgin rays on the woods, the waters, the peaceful cottage, the rustic bridge, and lingered in brightness round two solitary figures reclining on the bank, watching the course of the swelling stream. Its pallid beams revealed the features of a man who had passed life's carnal season, and was verging toward the autumnal grey; but though the lines of deep thought or sorrow were distinctly marked on his pale brow, there was an air of military dignity and command investing his figure, which showed at once that his youth had been passed in the tented field. The other figure was that of a young man in all the vigor of earliest manhood, in the simple dress of a forester, with the swarthy hunter, glittering eye, and jet-black locks of the Indian race. As we do not aim at mystery in the development of the simple story, we will gather up in few words, the events of the past, whose silent flight the young and gallant Stewart had become the enlisted and pensive moralist, who sat gazing on the brink of the stream; and Adario, the orphan boy of the murdered Sakamaw, the manly youth, whose ardent yet cultured glances told the observer, that these fellow-beings were bound unto

"Each other like the vine and oak,
Their roots entwined with their every stroke."

The young, the beautiful Augusta, won now the dwelling of "the dark and narrow river," as the widowed Koenig, Fort regarded with the world, had retired still deeper into the shades of the West, with the child of his adoption, and one sweet sisterior of her mother's charms, who had been baptised by the name of Lobella, in memory of the mother of Adario. This only daughter, accompanied by a maternal friend, had at the first time visited the scenes of her parent's nativity, and it was to watch the boat which was to bring back the rose of the wilderness to her solitary home, that the father and Indian youth, night after night, lingered on the banks, catching the faintest sound which anticipation might convert into the ripple caused by the dipping of Benilian and stormy, unattered feelings agitated the breast of Adario. Brod under the same roof, educated by the same delighted and gifted mind, these children of the forest grew up together entwined in heart and soul, like two planets whose roots are wrenched, and whose beams and bendits intertwine with each other in indissoluble wedlock. The son of Sakamaw, the daughter of Augusta—the dark and the fair—the eagle and the dove—it seemed to the sad and imaginative Stewart, that the spirit of the injured Sakamaw would rejoice in the land of ghosts, at the fate that should unite these descendants of their murdered tribes. Adario, tortured by jealousy and fear, awaited the return of Lobella with all the fiery impatience peculiar to the dark drama from which he derived his existence, though in her presence he was gentle and mild as the gambol of his sex, and all the harsher traits of the aboriginal character were softened and subdued, retaining only that dignity and elevation we can never deny to their own legitimate lover.

Though they had usually retired before the midnight hour, they remained this night longer, by a kind of mysterious sympathy and indescribable apprehension. Clouds gathered over the calm and universal heavens, and gradually deepening in darkness wrapt the woods and waters in their solemn shadows. A low wind arose and broke at intervals on the silence of the night, and then subsided, as if unwilling even to awaken the echoes of its own voice. The moon was in her distant thicket. All was gloom without and within, and the same sullen murmuring sound came more distinctly on the air, which was now damp with the heavy vapors. At last it ceased. The profusion of the waters—bright, but still remote—and sent a long stream of radiance down the channel of the river, far as the spot where they were seated, gazing in a kind of fascination on the unvouted splendor. Louder and louder were those sullen murmurs, and deeper and brighter grew the crimson and lightning-like flashes that illuminated the darkness of the wilderness. Onward it came, as if containing the principle of vitality in the fiery element that spread broader and fiercer around it—bowling forth as it came those unearthly sounds which to the ear of an untutored savage would have seemed the angry thunders of the Manitou. Standing on the very brink of the river, with breathless resonance, they watched the approach of the blazing phantom, when the father, whose perceptions became clearer as it neared, and who had heard of those wondrous fabrics, one of those noblest inventions of human genius, that propelled by vapor triumph in speed over the majestic ship or the lighter barque, believed in terror for the first time, that the fearful murderers of the waves, enveloped in a glory which was only the herald of its destruction. The thought of his daughter, that "if I must die, I exposed to the awful fate, wrapped in those volumed flames, came over him like a death-blast. At this moment the wild shrieks of the tremulous cries were heard confusedly mingling with the hoarse thunders and plunging sound of the waters—figures became visible through the elements of flame, wreathed with blackening smoke, that reflected now their lurid brightness on the whole face of the sky. Suddenly a hoarse burst through the blazing curtain, like an angel of light and the region of despair—it was but a glimpse of lovaliness; but that one glimpse discovered the fair, far-waving locks, the flashing pinions

COLONIZATION.—The Maryland Colonization Society is actively engaged in preparing a Fall expedition to Cape Palmas, which is expected to sail about the first week in December. The Agent reports the names of fifty-five emigrants already engaged; and perhaps in no preceding year has the Society found so many who are emphatically volunteers.

SLAVE QUESTION.—We understand that a black, one of the servants on board the Great Western, originally shipped here, and then discharged in England, and re-shipped there, has been claimed as a fugitive slave. As Captain Hosken shipped him in England, and is bound to return him there, he refuses to give him up without official instructions from the British Consul. There the matter now rests.

CUBA LAW.—The law against carrying deadly weapons is very severe in the island of Cuba, and is enforced with great severity. For the short time ago two American sailors went on shore at Havana, having about them the ordinary jack knives worn by seamen, and were immediately arrested and sentenced to imprisonment and hard labor for six years. They are said to be still in confinement.

OHIO WHEAT CROP.—There were 193,756 bushels of wheat, and 1196 barrels of flour, cleared from Massillon, Canton county, Ohio, during the month of October. ssaid the Cleveland Herald states that the whole amount received at that place by way of the canal, from the 1st to the 29th October, amounted to 356,743 bushels.

BURNT TO DEATH.—A colored man by the name of Johnson, was burnt to death a few days since, near Manch Chunk. He was asleep in a boat at the time his clothes took fire, and being doubled by sickness, was unable to extricate himself from his perilous situation.

A SNOW STORM.—The first snow weather at Montreal was exceedingly cold all the week, and snow began to fall plentifully about 6 o'clock, Thursday morning, continuing till about ten, when it considerably abated.

SUSPENSION OF NAVIGATION.—On Wednesday last, the Rochester merchants had a meeting, and agreed to suspend navigation, and lay up their boats on the 10th day of November.

PERJURY.—A man named John Roberts has been be arrested at New York, on a charge of perjury.

THE OHIO.—The river at Pittsburg was still rising on Saturday last. Two feet and a half water in the channel at the same time. The small streams were already running.

A NEW BRIDGE.—A new bridge across the North Branch, at Northumberland, was opened for travelling a few days since, with suitable ceremonies.

BARRELS AND FLOUR.—A miller near Dayton, Ohio, has contracted to deliver 1000 barrels of flour at $2,25. All kinds of provisions are coming down—our baker's loaves will soon be as big as a yoke of chalk.

A LITERARY BANKING ASSOCIATION.—A Library Company in Miamisburg, Ohio, has commenced issuing a paper under the title of Washington Bank. The court has allowed a " quo warranto," and will soon take it.

IMPORTANT FACT, IF TRUE.—A planter in Louisiana has discovered that where multicaulis trees grow, you find none of the coco grass so vexatious to the crops.

CUMBRIA FAIR.—Major Stanwicken, near Stanton, N. J., has obtained a patent for " Early Lepidocott," which has blossomed three times, and produced a second crop of excellent apples now on the trees. Not quite equal, however, in flavor to the first.

THE MOBILE COMMITTEE OF RELIEF acknowledge the receipt of $13,586, from sundry persons and places.

MUTINY.—The ship Stanley arrived at New Orleans on the 30th ult. the captain of which was killed on the 15th of October, by the first mate, ship Superior, Captain Tucker, of New York from Liverpool for Mobile, who informed him that he had on board 400 tons of coal, 1 ton of castile, for mutiny; and two others who were wounded, on deck—whether part of the mutiny or not, he did not state.

YALE COLLEGE.—The whole number of students this year, in the Theological, Law, Medical, Scientific, Senior, 79; Junors, 86; Sophomores, 123; Freshmen, 139. The two last classes are said to be the largest ever known in this institution, or perhaps any similar one in the country.

EXCELLENT ADVICE.—Call on a business man in business hours, only on business: run not your business, but attend to it during business hours in order to give him time to finish his business.

ANOTHER SOUTHERN RAILROAD.—We full much pleasure in noticing in yesterday's Inquirer, the extraordinary success of the new Wilmington and Raleigh Railroad. It was completed to Edwards, 18 miles. To-day we are glad to learn from the Baton Rouge Gazette, that the Louisiana and Mississippi Railroad is so far completed, that passengers and freight are transported to Jackson, and the branch to Clinton will soon be finished.

WOMEN AT A PREMIUM.—The Congress of Texas have passed a law granting 2000 acres of good land to every woman who will marry, during the present year, a citizen of that republic, to be located at the time of the declaration of their independence.

DARKNESS AT QUEBEC.—Singular Phenomenon.—The Quebec Canadian states that on the forenoon of the 18th October, a darkness settled upon that city, which rendered the use of candles necessary for several hours in the forenoon. The wind blew from the East, but the darkness clouds came from the West. The atmosphere was unusually clear the succeeding days of the 17th of October, 1834; and on the 14th of October, 1783.

METHODISM.—The Methodist sect is increasing rapid in the Western States. There has been an increase of 6700 in Indiana the last year.

MISSIONS.—Missionary intelligence from Hawaii, Sandwich islands, represents the efforts of the Rev. Mr. Coan, in that mountainous region to have been eminently successful. During 1839, his congregation numbered 5000, and two flourishing schools were in a flourishing condition.

IMPORTANT TO FARMERS.—A farmer of Long Island writes that the half-bred Durham cattle are better suited to bear the extremes of heat and cold which they will be exposed to in that climate, than the pure Durham, as their skins are thicker, and their coats closer and longer than the pure breed. The fattening qualities of the heifers bred in this way are almost beyond belief, some of them making forty and even fifty quarts a day of rich fine milk.

DRAWING THEM OFF.—The worst bills that we have ever seen are those of the Missouri (Ohio,) loan office Company, which are so bad that an individual at Cleveland proposes that if the physicians at Sandusky will receive them for curing the fever and ague, he will make a trap up that way, and take a few shakes, in order to get rid of them.

NEW ENTERPRISE.—A company is established at Cleveland, to embark in the valuable white fisheries on Lake Superior. They have despatched the schooner Algonquin, of 60 tons burthen, which can be carried a half mile by land around the Sault St. Marie, into the Lake. The trade has hitherto been monopolised by the American Fur and Hudson Bay Fur Companies.

FEVER IN SAVANNAH.—There were eleven deaths by "fever" in Savanah during the week ending the 29th ult.

DISPATCH.—A Capt. Low, who came passenger the other day in the Ontario from Kingston, in New York from St. Petersburgh in something less than 22 days. What an age is this in which we live!

NEW ORLEANS.—The abatement of the fever in New Orleans, is encouraging to the population in crowds. A paper of the 30th ult. says, that within the last sixty hours there had arrived 300 Americans, 600 Germans, 30 Irishmen, 200 slaves, besides seamen and steamboat hands.

PENSACOLA.—The New Orleans papers, of the 2d inst. state that sickness prevails at Pensacola to an alarming extent. The disease is of a malignant type, and is said to resemble somewhat in its symptoms, the yellow fever.

A MAHOMETAN.—The New Haven Record states that one of the Africans of the Amistad has been discovered to be the son of a Mahometan priest, and is able to read a portion of an Arabic prayer.

EMIGRATION.—The emigration into Canada seems to increase very rapidly. This season, to the 19th ult. there has arrived at Quebec 7327 emigrants against 3239 during the same period last year, showing an increase this season of 4118.

ROBBERY.—On Sunday last, the family of Mr. Alexander King, a passenger from the West, in a Jonaita boat, at Harrisburg, was broken open by some villains during divine worship. $1,000 in cash belonging to the boat were arrested and lodged in jail.

EXCHITING.—The Value of Goods exported from Great Britain to this country in 1838 is estimated at £20,000,000 sterling. The goods received from this country in return, during the same period, are valued at sixty millions Sterling against this country, thirty millions which had to be paid in specie.

A LOSS.—The Vicksburg Sentinel states that on the night of the 23d ult. Osman Claiborne lost, by incendiary fire, his whole cotton crop, and about 3000 bushels of corn.

IMPORTANT CENSUS.—The total number of the canine race in the United States, is computed at two millions.

FROM NEW CRUZ.—The bark ANN EZA, arrived this morning at Pier No. 4 North River, at New York, bringing $100,010 in specie. Capt. B. states that the French brig Naiade had received on board the last instalment of the $600, 000 agreed to be paid to France by the Mexican Government. The conducts which brought the above amount to Vera Cruz not having arrived at day previous to that appointed for payment, the French Consul threatened to protest the following day. The commercial houses at Vera Cruz subscribed the amount immediately, until the conducts should arrive.

No news from the Capital. The Republic was in a state of tranquility. The Federalists having been completely put down, the Central Government was more firmly established than ever.—The Commerce Secretary was proceeding to reform the Constitution, agreeably to the expressed wish of the Ex-President Santa Anna.

CAPE CUT CANAL.—The Pittsburg Gazette, in referring to the Cross Cut Canal, says—"We understand that the Secretary and Board of Directors, Mr. Leicester King, who informed us that he had, within a few days, passed along the whole line of the canal, and was pleased to find that they should have three weeks more of good weather, they would start a boat load of flour from the basin on the canal, and send it by the Cross Cut through to Pittsburg. That the work will not, at that time, be completed, but that will be so far advanced as to permit the passage of boats through with a light load. We may, therefore, with the fullest confidence, calculate that we will next spring have a direct water communication with the lake at the head of Lake Erie. This consummation will form a new era in the annals of our city; one that has long been the subject of our fondest hopes, and will secure a large field to our mechanics and manufacturers."

WEST FLORIDA RAIL ROAD.—The St. Joseph Times announces the completion of the Railroad from that place to Iola. The cars had commenced running, and in a few days the road was to be opened permanently. From the same paper, we learn that Captain Guion, of the U. S. Army, had commenced operations for a rail road to Iola and Tallahassee Railroad. A sufficient guard had been provided and every facility afforded.

GEORGIA RAIL ROAD.—Eighty miles of the Georgia Central Railroad is completed, and the work is making such progress, that by the 1st of January next, it will be in a condition to be travelled. The road will reach from a point near the centre of the state to a point on the sea coast. It will be in a position to bring to market the products of the inter ior of Georgia will find a cheap and ready access to a market.

The Louisville Journal speaking of the Ohio river, says it does not run fast, but shows a good channel before.

THE POST OFFICE, at Harrodsburg, (Ky.) with four other buildings, was destroyed by fire on the 1st inst.

REPRIEVE.—We understand that Nelson, who was convicted at the last term of the Circuit Court for murder of Gabriel, has been reprieved by the the Governor of North Carolina, until the second Friday in January next.

THE FEVER SOUTH.—We have Mobile dates to the 30th ult. The Chronicle of that date says:

"The cases of yellow fever are more unfrequent, notwithstanding the return of many of our citizens, who have been absent during the summer, which we think authorizes us to announce a continued improvement in the general state of the health. Early in last week, however, several cases of a very malignant type occurred among our oldest citizens, which produced considerable alarm. But during the past four days we have heard of but few cases. We are induced to believe there is but little sickness in the city."

AGRICULTURAL FAIRS.—It is gratifying to perceive a reviving attention to country fairs, corresponding to the higher rank agriculture is assuming in our country. The interest excited in the Atlantic States, where they commenced, they are not so in the West, especially in the valley of Ohio, &c. In the latter State, at the recent fair in Geauga county, premiums in money were awarded for the best cattle, sheep, swine, poultry, and for various manufactured products, among them raw silk, also an entire dress, manufactured and worn by Mrs. E. D. Howe. The first fair, also in Cuyahoga county was lately held at Cleveland, and went off finely; the ladies contributing.

TEXAS.—The Houston Telegraph, of Oct. 16th, gives the following account of an onslaught upon a party of settlers by the Indians:

"About the end of this month, a party of thirteen men, one woman, and two children, started from a settlement, about ten miles below the city of Austin, for the purpose of making a permanent location on the San Gabriel river, about sixty miles above Austin. After having travelled about two days, and encamped for the night, the whole party were attacked by a body of Indians, and they shut thirteen men killed on the spot. The woman and her two children were not found. The attack was made in an open prairie. It appears that the Indians surrounded and charged upon the party, who fought manfully to the last. The names of the individuals killed are, two Reeses, of Brazoria; John Webster, John Stillwell, Wilson Fleshier, of Virginia; Martin Watson, Scotland; Bailey, Nicholas Boyler, Milton Hicks, of Kentucky. Wm Rice, of Virginia; Albert Sillsbey, of Kentucky. James Morrison, of Texas; Leusher, a musician and a negro man.

THE NUMBER OF PRISONERS confined in the Georgia penitentiary, at the present time, is 160.

THE DEATHS IN NEW YORK, last week, were 253; males 71, females 53.

THE AMERDS HONORABLE.—The Boston Post, desirous of doing justice to a Mr. Dow, who, it appears, had taken offence at some of its remarks, observes, "It is but justice to say that Mr. D. is a trader of unimpeachable integrity, and from our own knowledge we can affirm that he furnishes as good beer as ever sweetened Adam's Ale."

NEW PACKET.—Another new packet ship, the last of the season, will be launched in a few days, on the East River, N. Y. She is of one thousand tons burthen, and will be named the "Stephen Whitney," in honor of one of the wealthiest merchants in N. Y. Captain Thompson, formerly of the St. Andrew, will command her, and she will run in connection with the Virginia, United States and Sheffield, of Mr. Kermit's line.

A BRILLIANT METEOR.—The West Chester Record says, that on Wednesday night week, the soft and beamy atmosphere was illuminated for an instant, by a meteor off to the south-east. It moved through the air like a shooting star, and then exploded, producing a noon day brightness, like a flash of gunpowder. After the explosion, the light almost faded, a flake of fire, for near a minute, in the firmament, resembling a dragon which gradually became suffused and mingled into a soft glare, and disappeared. The explosion was such as the lightning's flash, but had none of its terrific vividness; it was soft and bland. Superstition might consider such a brilliant display of celestial glory, as an omen of coming dire calamities to the nation and people.

Political Intelligence.

THE LEGISLATURE OF RHODE ISLAND has adjourned after passing a law for the protection of the banks from the penalties of suspension by prohibiting the recovery of costs in suits before justices of the peace, and requiring plaintiffs to recover costs in but one suit at any term of any court. In the city, the vote was, for Everett, W. 4925 for Morton, D. 4,383—W. 542 ahead. In 1837, against 2921. The entire Whig ticket for Senators and Representatives is elected. Mr. Lawrence is sent to Congress by a majority of about 1400.

170 towns are heard from, and Everett leads Morton 18,435.

The Boston Atlas of Wednesday morning stood thus last year: Everett, 13,680—Morton, 18,435.

Naval and Military Affairs.

BRITISH SAILORS.—Great Britain continues to augment her naval force. Two eight gun brigs of battle ships are to be commenced at Chatham—the Mars and the Majestic. Considerable difficulty is experienced in the enlistment of seamen. We observe in a London paper some grave comments on the conduct of the United States for employing British sailors on board American ships.

NAVAL DEATH.—The southern papers announce the death of William A. Slacum, Esq. a Purser in the Navy.

ACCIDENT.—During the firing, on Saturday last week, by the United States troops, at Buffalo, a soldier, whose name we did not learn, from the 4th Regiment, was accidentally shot in the right arm, shattering it so severely as to require immediate amputation. He is doing well.

Financial Record.

THE ACCEPTANCES.

The following paper which has appeared in print since our last, is important, as it tends to set at rest, any doubts as to the credit of the United States Bank with the Rothschilds. It is said that the bank has placed in France more than a million of francs over and above their suspended liabilities.

From the Paris, 23d Sept. 1839.

To the President of the Bank of the United States, Philadelphia.

Mr. President

We have the honor to inform you that we have arrived this day at the sum of your credit on account the amount of 5,500,000 francs, your drafts on the Messrs. Hottinguers, which remained in suspense—We take it for granted that Mr. Judson will have made with you other arrangements entered into by us with him for this purpose and consequentlyconsider it unnecessary to repeat them—We shall almost regret ourselves to furnishing you, on the other side, a memorandum of such of your drafts as have been left in our hand to-day to be clothed with our acceptance.

We are happy, Mr. President, to have found an opportunity to give you a proof of the high consideration for the establishment over which you presside, and to have been able, at the same time to arrest the disastrous effects which this event might have occasioned on the part of Messrs Hottinguers in being compelled to produce in our place, as well as in Lyons, by many holders of your bills, who, pressed by their necessities to an immediate realisation of their funds, were offering to part with these securities at a loss over the discount.

We shall correspond with Mr. Judson in every thing concerning our acceptances on your account, in conformity to his request made to us, so that we shall not be obliged to trouble you with details relative to this operation, except in case of new instructions on your part.

We present to you, Mr. President, assurances of our most distinguished consideration.

(Signed,) J.R. ROTHSCHILD, frères.

A. DE ROTHSCHILD.

ANOTHER SPECIE CIRCULAR.—According to the St. Louis Republican, nothing but gold and silver is to be received hereafter at the Land Offices in Illinois, Missouri, Iowa, and Wisconsin. Such, says that paper, are understood to have been the instructions sent out to those receivers, who have heretofore been in the habit of depositing Treasury Notes in the Banks of Missouri. The same paper, which is dated the 30th ult. mentions that Land Office money is now continuing to flow in from Burlington, Iowa, of 10 and 15 per cent. over Kentucky, Ohio, Illinois, and Indiana paper.

ENIGMA.

My ancient dwelling was the sea;
I roamed long unfurnished and free,
Did not imagine, did not flee,
The will did veil of my career.
When summers raged and storms rose high,
All unconcerned was the sky,
Tempests and storms with all their force,
Could not impede my onward course;
And former whirlwinds were in vain,
To obstruct my passage, thro' the main.
I had a master bold and kind,
Who feared me best, nor frigid cold;
But then sent I my master dead,
And I on his my fortune bled,
And tho' you may suppose it strange,
I underwent a curious change:
Here cruel and malicious fate,
Made me the object of its hate,
All through the long and toilsome day,
Confined to some dark spot I lay,
Compelled as prisoner to sojourn,
The core of some ox-cow's concern—
And when at last the night returned,
My very soul within me burned,
To think I was the slave of all,
Both young and Old—both Great and Small.
No wonder that I pined away,
As chill wind makes the leaves decay,
True I was in gay company,
But Oh what could it be to me!
No wonder then my life was tried,
Weighed down by such consuming grief,
A burning fever (my disease),
Reduced me slowly by degrees,
And still compelled to serve mankind,
By fist surprised that I declined.
I did not spare a day for rest,
No pillow did support my head,
Alone knew I not and mercy fled,
Nor not a sent for me was used,
Without a single saying friend,
At last I came to my end.

THE VEIL.—Perhaps the most striking, as the most picturesque change in costume, which we have universally worn in Italy; and but that the present day does not prone itself on its romance, it were a matter of marvel how a woman could ever be induced to abandon an article of dress so full of poetical and graceful associations.

It appears from the "London Catalogue," that 25,000 volumes of books have been published in London within the last twenty-five years, not including successive editions of the same work, or editions not recognized by the trade.

The Philadelphia Lodger, speaking of Grenville Mellen as the author of a Temperance Ode, calls him a Water Mellon.

PRESENTMENT.—Our nature has many mysteries—the moral and physical world are strangely allied; the weight on the air presages the hurricane—the darkness on the heavens, the tempest—why may not destiny have its signs, and the heart its portents, and the soul its omens that oppresses the spirits forbode the coming sorrow?

ILL-DESERVED COMMENDATION.—Praises of the unworthy are fed by ardent minds as robbers on the deserving.

CONSCIENCE.—Goethe makes a curious remark, which either contains a great truth, or in a moment of malicious humor, a great falsehood. He says, "Use is conscience. No one has a conscience but the relieving."

DEFINITION OF A HEART.—It is said that there is not music heart in the intercourse of the higher orders, and that truth and feeling are only to be found amongst the people in the walks of retired and humble life. A fashionable man being cold that he had no heart, replied: "Heart—what's that? Oh! a thing actual maids have, and knock for John, Betty, and Joan."

NAPOLEON AND MUSIC.—When he was cross he walked about with his hands behind him, humming a tune as fabrey as possible, and then few dared approach him. "If you have any thing to ask of the General," said Junot to M. Arnault, one day, "I advise you not to go near him just now, for he is singing."

A NEW ANIMAL.—On a bridge across a river in Ohio following, besides the usual toll, is one, for line for crossing this bridge faster than a mule." Query—What sort of an animal is a mule, and how fast does it travel?

THEOLOGIANS.—MORE Theologians, Richter severely but justly remarks, are the presumption and narrowness of all egotists; they make God the free servant of their petty parish, and only to gaze that eclipses of the sun are sent only to shade and cool them on their way to church.

A CRITERION BY WHICH WOMEN ESTIMATE MEN.—What a curious trait that is in women—their exaggerated anxiety to see one who has been unduly lauded in whom they themselves take an interest; and the manner in which the sex and man rate talk in their relations, according as they admire, or are disappointed in, the object of the same group has formed more effectually the romantic interest the female world concerned for Byron, than a sight of the persons on whom affection he prided himself. Byron might have committed in their eyes a thousand sins more excusable than the error of bad taste.

A NOVEL WAY OF POPPING THE QUESTION TO THE ODD.—A friend relates the following incident as having occurred at a counting room of Mr. ——, a short time since. The scene where in this city. A number of gentlemen, for the lack of other subjects, were conversing on what one has would make of money if he were wealthy. A clerk in the establishment, stood by and said nothing. At length he was addressed by ton, one turned to him and said, "Well, Jim, if you were rich as Astor would you do?"

"I would ask Mr. —— for his daughter, Mary."

Mr. —— looked surprised: the by-standers saw the point, and loud laughs and Jim's sanguine prospect of having both his wishes gratified, wealth and Mary.

No matters, upon honor!

EXPERIENCE PENETRATES THE HEART.—The drops that trickle within the cavern harden, yet brighten into gems as they are formed; the soil is more polished, nothing more cold, than that sudden effusion of the work of affection, and the former passionate, and is formed within a mossy and solitary shell.

LADIES' FASHIONS.—In Connecticut, in former times, they had their hair tied so tight upon the back part of their heads, that it drew their eyes apart so much they could not get them sufficiently near together to kiss their lovers, without loosing their balance.

SINGER'S EXCUSE.—A famous musician who had made his fortune by marriage, being requested to sing a passage, "pretending to be modest, "to imitate the nightingale, who never sings after he has made her nest."

EFFECTS OF FLATTERY.—An unsuccessful lover was asked by what means he lost his charmer? "Indeed," said he, "I flattered her until she got too proud to speak to me."

AFFECTION.—On the proper and complete exercise of the affections depends the welfare of the man of life—their perversion, and as the meanest scrap of grass, of lead, or tinsel, looks beautiful and costly through the reflecting mirror, and the kaleidoscope, so can the most common and dreary scene around us assume the rainbow hues which through the beautifying medium of gratified affection.

A DISTRESSING CASE.—If I had only seen Robin before he became insensible, it would be from some sudden concussion, and so entirely retained of his usual British spirits, to an acquaintance a few days after the death of a brother in a neighboring town, "to be sure you are very much afflicted, indeed," responded his friend, with an aspect of unusual consternation; "but, Sir, continued the bereaved relative, blustering at the so-called sympathizer, he had two gold watches, and no one, you know, can have two at once, let him go as one can of them."

RELIGION.—Those who have religion must necessarily be more happy at all times than those who have it not; for in the midst of pain and affliction their faith will fill their minds with the joys of heaven—joys in which they feel that they must soon participate—and to the unchristian even their immediate earthly troubles are insignificant in the sight, surmounting the clouds that hang loweringly over the earth, floats far above in the sunny and unclouded heaven.—Southern Literary Messenger.

Good Humor is the clear blue sky of the soul.

CEREMONY, EXPERIENCE AND LIFE.—Ceremony is the language of experience and the rule is, "De nom existendior of non apprendious of life." Life is a translated experience—ceremonies—love black eyes and there white accelends to day, embalmed to morrow;—it is a sense of lessons.

GOOD-BYE.—Let Lord Byron say what he will of loyal and brilliant, good is beneficial to mankind and its love—its warm, unconsealing, devoted love—as exaggerating as its simplicity and truth—from its fountain is the very poetry of sincerity; after years have nothing like it. To know that the love we have bestowed cannot die—to have an end, destroys its immortality; and thus brought in to level with the beginning and endings, the chances and changes of life, commonplace, unimportant, and consequently, and therefore the sublime to the ridiculous, there is but a step; our departures are as old; we are parting no one, too worthy for our former faith, and we laugh at what we wept before; such laughter is more bitter—a thousand times more bitter, than tears.

A GOOD UP.—In the town of Columbia, State of Georgia, there resides a Mr. ——, a "limb of the law" named Mr. W——, his "shingle" sticks out with the following inscription: "Mr. W——, Counsellor, Notary Public and Attorney at Law." It happened, one day last week, that a man from one of the country, arrived in Columbus, and after investing some three pennyworth in gingerbread, was thinking about the best way of seeing the sights, and trying to decipher the various sign-boards—finally he brought up before the one in question. He spells the aforesaid "shingle," when he stopped, and gazing up at the inscription, read as follows: "Mr. W——, notorious public, and eternally out law!" "Well," said the countryman, "that must be a great knabber."—New Orleans Picayune.

TASTE.—A correct taste is ever the ornament and a chaste mind; for, as a celebrated author has justly observed, our taste commonly determines our merit. "I have a natural disrelish of all that is delicate in sentiment and just in conception; it softens the asperity of truth, and decks reason in the most persuasive garments.

FRIENDSHIP.—The occupations of my life has been to sequore the friendship of great and gentlemen. With some I have found more talent of the mind, or virtue of the heart; and my intelligence was enlarged, and my emotions became more pure. I have expanded my sensibility in that of my friend; and I have preferred the passion of friendship to that of love; for friendship can be participated, but love has but one object. Friendship is a sanctuary where all light other torches without wasting itself; but love, like a sepulchral lamp is extinguished in the solitary tomb.

NO GA.—An old gentleman who used to frequent one of the theatres in Dublin, being unwell, thought he might make so free as to express an opinion concerning his case. Accordingly, one day he took an opportunity of asking one of the faculty, who sat in the same box with him, what he should take for such a complaint? "Advice," said the doctor.

MY LOVE.

Leaves have the right to flow in fall,
And flower to wither in the north-wind's breath.—Homer.

I grieve for ye, my pretty flowers,
I hear the northwind's moan,
As rushing through the woodland bowers,
It breathes its mournful tone.

I know it hears to each loved bell
A fearful withering blight,
In fear will shall, and lonely fall,
'Twill fade their hose so bright.

He ga den flowers, they too rose die,
They wane soon after bloom;
And I must see them scatter'd in
Their beauty having past.

Oh! they have been companions dear,
To me in my lonely hour,
My spirit and it oft would cheer
To meet my lovelies flower.

My spirit and it oft would cheer
To meet my lovelies flowers.
My love is changed, my love is gone,
"They'll bloom with spring sun's ray."

That voice is with instruction fill,
It says "that man now dies,
But he will rise again to life,
In glorious beauty rise." OLLIE.

WELSH SCULL.—At a ford in South Wales is a board with this inscription:—Take notice when this board is under water the river is impassable. An Act of Parliament was procured by the Welsh for Book to be translated into Welsh, for the purpose of making the Welsh learn English.—"Did you ever remember to get out and cold a sumatra?" said a lady to Mr. Rogers. "Yes, madam, last winter, I replied the wit.

LOVE OF APPROBATION.—Nothing appears to me so absurd as placing our happiness in the love or esteem of those who have themselves no or our own sense of them. The fear of being thought vulgar, is the moral hydrophobia of the day; our weakness and pain is a thousand times more regret and shame than our faults.

DUELLING EXTRAORDINARY.

MR. BRAGG had drawn so largely upon the belief of a number of his friends, some of whom he proceeded to have been an eye-witness to several of its operations could not help expressing their doubts. The narrator was offended, and intimated that the truth of what he had been relating with the more warmth, since Mr. Bragg's veracity was not in question. The circumstance excited not a little astonishment, as the major was justly esteemed a man of excellent understanding, and particularly tenacious of truth. The surprise of all present was greatly increased by the tone in which he addressed them.

Indeed, in my opinion, Mr. Bragg has always had reason to complain of the unfortunately happens that nothing seems more improbable than truth, and I can feel from my own experience. When I was a student at Jena, I once went with Baron Von Johns to the opera, which was performed, as well, to Weimar, in order to attend the performance of The Maid of Orleans, at the theatre of that city. The part of the heroine was assigned to Madame Wolfe, and she acted in with so much ability, that I could not forbear applauding her scene loudly, expressing my satisfaction. The audience were equally pleased with myself, and the actress would not acknowledge the repeated tributes of applause which were bestowed on her, but absolutely refused to let the curtain rise again. Surprised at this unexpected conduct, I inquired of the Baron the reason of it, when he informed me that it was the custom of the theatre, when a performer was honored with a double encore, to send him a present of a gold medal, which was immediately suspended to the button hole of the left breast. "Then," said I, "why don't you send her a medal?" "We have not one," replied he, "in the house." "Then," said I, "why don't you send her your own?" "Mine!" exclaimed he, "I would not part with mine for the world." "Then," said I, "why don't you send her mine?" "Yours!" said he, "you are a foreigner, and cannot be entitled to the honor." "Then," said I, "why don't you send her your own?" "Mine!" said
